Tender opportunity: Quotation for a Befriending Service

Source: ProContract / FINE

Buyer: Redcar & Cleveland Borough Council

Respond by: 10th March 2011 (Request for Quotation)

The Council is seeking organisations to run befriending and / or good neighbour schemes across East Cleveland. The aim of the service is to help reduce loneliness and social isolation amongst older people aged 50+. Essentially the service would offer personal visits at least once per week and / or weekly phone calls to people who are housebound or cannot leave the house alone, have limited social networks of their own and are considered at risk of needing social care input.

The Council wants to hear about other supportive roles voluntary groups could have alongside befriending (e.g. supporting people on discharge from hospital until a longer term service is found, keeping in touch with people over the internet, more practical services including gardening tasks or decorating). Whilst it is expected that the majority of the befrienders will be operating in a voluntary capacity it is important that there is a strong management infrastructure in place in order to take referrals. The organisation will be funded for administrative functions, office services and possibly office space. The amount of money available is £20,000, with the contract scheduled for 1st April 2011 to 31st March 2012.

This opportunity is being procured through a quotation process. This means there is no pre-qualification stage and all interested parties can submit a quotation.

Interested parties will be sent a Quotation Pack containing:

- details of the information to be included in the response
- further information on the contract needs (such as the specification)
- contractual terms and conditions
- evaluation criteria
- details and timetable of the process

UK Steel Enterprise (Tees Valley)

Source: FINE

Type of funder: Company – Not for profit arm

Open to: Small-Medium Enterprises (must have sound business plan)

Funding: Lending (various); see text. Maximum £750,000

Deadline: Not specified

UK Steel Enterprise Ltd (UKSE) aims to help the economic regeneration of communities affected by changes in the steel industry. They work in steel areas across the UK assisting job and wealth creation by supporting small and medium enterprises with finance and premises. They also assist community initiatives in these areas with both funding and in kind support.

Equity and/or loan finance is available for start-ups, expansions, acquisitions and buy-outs. Developing businesses with a well thought out business plan may be able to secure investment up to £750,000. Possible investment includes:

Share capital and share/loan packages

- Share capital refers to the portion of an organisation's equity obtained by trading stock to a shareholder (UKSE) for cash or an equivalent capital item. Share capital will help strengthen the balance sheet
- Security is not required. As a shareholder, UKSE are more likely to be able to provide further expansion finance. Their shareholding will not usually exceed 25% of the company's equity and they leave control and management decisions in the hands of the directors

Loans

- UKSE loans benefit from competitive fixed interest rates so that any base rate movements will not affect the cost of the loan
- Typically, loans are provided over a three to four year term. All loans may be repaid early without any penalty
- Larger loans are usually required to be secured (guaranteed) against business assets. Small loans are generally unsecured and will be free of administration or similar charges
- For business projects where security is not available they may be able to provide funding from the Enterprise Finance Guarantee Scheme. The most appropriate funding solution however, may be a mixed share capital/loan package

Enterprise Finance Guarantee Scheme

UK Steel Enterprise is an accredited provider of this Government backed scheme. This enables funding for appropriate projects where there is insufficient security available in business assets to access a secured loan from the usual commercial sources. Effectively, the Government provides a guarantee against part of the loan amount. The scheme is available to qualifying UK businesses with an annual turnover of up to £25m. The recipient is required to pay a quarterly guarantee premium to the Government which is calculated as 2% per annum on the outstanding loan balance.

Big Society

Source: Social Enterprise Live / Civil Society / FINE

Project Merlin talks between the government and the UK's biggest banks have resulted in an extra £200m for the Big Society Bank. This £200m is to be supplied to the bank over two years and will be in addition to the money banks are supposed to hand over from dormant bank accounts – which is estimated at anywhere between £60m-£100m. The £200m is touted as part of £1.2bn package to support 'regional growth and the Big Society'. However, the £1bn promised for regional growth - even though the money is supposed to be aligned to the objectives of the Regional Growth Fund - will only be used to increase the size of the previously announced Business Growth Fund, an equity fund targeted at businesses with a turnover of £10-100m. More relevant for the multitude of SMEs in the social enterprise sector is the announcement that Barclays, HSBC, Lloyds, RBS and Santander have agreed to increase the amount of money lent to SMEs by 15 per cent in 2011 up from £66bn in 2010 to £76bn.

<http://www.socialenterpriselive.com/section/news/money/20110209/merlin-conjures-%C2%A3200m-big-society-bank>

The Charities Aid Foundation is concerned that Big Society Bank loans could be too expensive for many charities and social enterprises. They have warned that if the bank operates on a commercial basis from the outset there is a risk that it will not let charities and social enterprises access affordable capital and that the focus should be on social – rather than financial - return.

Outcome and outcome indicator banks – research report

Source: Charities Evaluation Service / FINE

This research, published by Charities Evaluation Service, investigates Outcome Indicator Banks - the bringing together of a range of methods already used to demonstrate outcomes.

In 2007 Homeless Link researched the use of shared outcomes measurement systems within housing and homelessness organisations. In the same year, the new economics foundation (nef) published a think piece discussing the feasibility of sharing outcomes across the sector. Both reports found that organisations were struggling to identify and measure the outcomes of their work. nef concluded that indicator banks could help this by bringing together a range of methods already used in accessible locations. nef also suggested that shared outcome indicators could enhance the effectiveness of funders and the organisations they support by providing common measures, allowing better comparison between projects.

This research explores four questions:

- What outcome and outcome indicator banks exist. How are they being used?
- What were the drivers behind the development of these banks?
- What direction might these banks take in the future?
- What else is under development that could be used as an outcome or outcome indicator bank?
